

July 9, 2009

Hey everyone,

Sorry I haven't written anything in a couple days. Its been really exhausting up here and haven't really been in the mood to write. ☹

But anyways, the first three days of the VBS have been so much fun. All these kids are so precious! Even though most of the kids have Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, it gives us all the more reason to love them and want to spend time with them. A boy named, Junior, is one of the cutest kids I have ever seen and met. I really want to take him home with me. He is pretty attached to Jake most of the time but I try to pry Junior away from him, because I want to spend time with him too. Also, another little boy, Ronnie, is my second favorite. He tends to hit and pull hair but still is a little ball of fun. Most of the little ones here like to be held and given a lot of attention, because most of their parents do not give the kids all the attention a little one needs. All of these kids have something unique about them, which just make them individually amazing. I feel that our group has made quite an impact on a lot of these kids. (Even the teenagers)

Ok well I will continue to keep up on my days! ☺

-Wibbs

July 4th, 2009

HAPPY FOURTH OF JULY!!!

Hey everyone. We are on our way to Copper center (where we are holding our VBS) These first two days have been really fun, filled with hours upon hours of souvenir shopping, delicious food, and late nights with a MASSIVE pillow fight. It was probably the most intense pillow fight ever. There were mattresses flipped, people squished, and ice thrown. Everyone was safe, but was a Blast! ☺ I know that these upcoming days will be filled with even more excitement, the spreading of God's beautiful word, and just LOADS OF FUN!!!!

Ill write again soon

Love - Wibbs